

considering vasectomy?

Vasectomy is a permanent method of contraception for men. It is only suitable for men who are 100% sure that they will not want children at any time in the future.

You might find the thought of vasectomy a bit scary, but more than 65,000 UK men choose vasectomy every year because it is very safe and effective.

The facts

Vasectomy will not affect your sex life or your ability to enjoy sex.

You will still have erections and produce the same amount of semen when you ejaculate. The only difference is that after vasectomy your semen will contain no sperm. Many men (and their partners) say that they enjoy sex more once they are freed from the worry of unwanted pregnancy.

Vasectomy explained

Sperm travels from the testes via two tubes (vas deferens) during sex, and mixes with semen before ejaculation. Vasectomy is a minor operation to cut and tie or seal the tubes so sperm are not released into the semen. Sperm will continue to be produced after vasectomy, but are naturally re-absorbed into the body.

You are safe with us

At BPAS, we have been specialising in reproductive healthcare for over 40 years. All our clinics are Care Quality Commission registered, which means that you get a high quality service and are cared for by a team of well qualified staff.

Our experienced surgeons complete the procedure in about 15 minutes, usually under local anaesthetic. For a couple of weeks after, most men experience discomfort and mild swelling, which can be easily managed with low dose painkillers.

So why not book a confidential appointment to discuss your treatment needs on a one-to-one basis?

BPAS provides vasectomy treatment privately, and also on behalf of the NHS in some areas.
